PREVENTION + TREATMENT OF CHILD ABUSE

Rooted in Hope

At Childhelp, our promise is a call to action—driving every program, service, and relationship we build. It’s a commitment to create a world where every child, regardless of their past, has the opportunity to rise, heal, and thrive.

Our Vision:

We believe every child has limitless potential, and our mission is to help them fully realize it. By providing the tools, resources, and support they need, we empower children to transform their futures and become the strong, compassionate leaders of tomorrow.

Our vision—a world where every child can play, learn, live and feel loved without fear of abuse or neglect—guides every aspect of our work. Addressing the immediate effects of abuse is just the beginning. We are committed to fostering lasting healing, preventing future harm, breaking cycles of abuse, and equipping children and families with the knowledge and tools to build brighter, safer futures.

This vision is brought to life by our nationwide network of staff whose specialized care supports children and families affected by abuse. They are uplifted by the generosity of donors and volunteers, whose contributions fuel our mission and advocacy. Together, we ensure communities have access to life-changing resources and create spaces where children and families can disrupt cycles of abuse, build resilience, and embrace brighter tomorrows.

A Path of Purpose: Bringing Hope to Life

As we reflect on the impact Childhelp has made over the past 66 years, we are filled with gratitude for the countless children and families whose lives have been transformed through the love, care, and support you’ve made possible. In our early days as young actresses entertaining troops in Japan, we provided care for half-American children abandoned as “throwaways” in their homeland. Today, we lead a movement to end child abuse across America, and our mission has always been rooted in hope and the unwavering belief that every child deserves a brighter, more loving future.

This year, we focused on building the future together. The challenges remain vast: With each passing day, more children face the harsh realities of abuse, neglect, and violence. Yet, through your unwavering support, we continue to reach those in need. Your contributions have been critical in expanding our services and ensuring children in crisis receive the care they need.

But our work doesn’t stop with the children we serve. We are empowering families to create safe, nurturing environments where children can heal. By addressing not just the symptoms of abuse but its root causes, we are working to break the cycle of abuse for future generations. Together, we are laying the foundation for healthier families and stronger communities, ensuring children grow up surrounded by love, safety, and support.

Every visit to a Childhelp Advocacy Center, every call to the Childhelp National Child Abuse Hotline, every Childhelp Speak

Up Be Safe program, and every child placed in the loving arms of a Childhelp foster family helps children and families begin to envision a future free from the shadows of abuse. Your support provides them with the opportunity to experience life as it should be—safe, loved, and full of hope.

But our mission is not yet complete. The road to eradicating child abuse is long, and it requires our continued commitment and action. Together, we can expand our reach, strengthen our programs, and ensure that no child has to suffer in silence. Every child deserves to be loved, supported, and safe.

Thank you for being an integral part of the transformations that carry young lives from shadow to light. Your dedication to this mission fills us with hope, and with your continued support, we can build a future where every child and family has the chance to thrive. The love of your heart guides these children to a lifetime of hope, and we are so grateful that you care.

A Hidden Epidemic: The Reality of Child Abuse in America

Every year, millions of children in the United States fall victim to the devastating effects of abuse and neglect. Child protection agencies receive over 4.3 million referrals involving nearly 7.8 million children, a staggering number that paints a grim picture of a crisis affecting children from all walks of life. Tragically, the true scope of the epidemic is even worse: for every incident of child abuse or neglect reported, an estimated two incidents go unreported, leaving countless children suffering in silence.

Each day, an average of five children lose their lives to abuse and neglect, with the youngest among them bearing the heaviest toll. But the damage doesn't end there. The long-term consequences of abuse are far-reaching, often leading to addiction, mental illness, chronic health issues, and early mortality. These invisible scars perpetuate cycles of trauma, affecting not only the children but entire communities for generations.

9X the risk of criminal involvement for children who suffer from abuse or neglect

18 months the age by which most children become victims of abuse or neglect

$120 billion the annual economic burden of child abuse

80% of abused children will develop a psychiatric disorder by age 21

Despite the heartbreaking statistics, there is hope. Child abuse is not an inevitability—it's a preventable crisis, and at Childhelp, we are determined to turn the tide. We recognize that this is a hidden epidemic, one that can only be eradicated through a combination of prevention, education, advocacy, and intervention. Through our programs, we don't just address the immediate needs of children in crisis; we work to break the cycles of abuse that can continue unchecked, offering healing and hope to those who need it most.

By shining a light on this hidden epidemic and empowering communities to take action, we are laying the foundation for a future where no child is left in the shadows of abuse and neglect.

To better understand the real impact of child abuse and neglect, we invite you to listen to the Childhelp Dare to Care Survivors Series podcast. Hear firsthand stories from survivors and advocates as they share their journeys of healing and hope. Scan the QR code to listen now.

Looking Ahead: A Future Free from Child Abuse

As we reflect on another year of impactful work, I'm struck by how Childhelp has not only faced the challenges of today but taken bold steps to prepare for tomorrow. As Chief of Staff, I have the privilege of overseeing the daily operations that bring Childhelp's mission to life. This role allows me to witness firsthand the dedication of our staff, volunteers, donors, and partners, who have contributed to the incredible strides we've made this year.

This year, Childhelp has continued to provide critical services to children and families in need. From the Childhelp National Child Abuse Hotline to our Childhelp Advocacy Centers, your unwavering support has allowed us to reach more children than ever before. Together, we've made a profound impact, offering healing, safety, and hope to those who need it most.

Looking ahead, we are focused on preparing for the future by laying the groundwork that will ensure our long-term success. We've made strategic decisions to strengthen our foundation, integrating innovative solutions, streamlining operations, and expanding access to the critical services we provide. These efforts will ensure our next 66 years are even more impactful than the last. We are committed to creating safe, nurturing environments where children can grow up loved and hopeful, and we will continue to evolve in response to the needs of those we serve.

But we cannot do this alone. The work is far from over, and we remain steadfast in our commitment to creating a world where child abuse is eradicated. With your continued support, we will move forward, prepared for the future and driven by our shared mission to protect children for generations to come.

Thank you for being a crucial part of Childhelp's progress. Together, we are building a future that children can thrive in—a future that is brighter, safer, and rooted in hope.

With hope for the future,

Michael Medoro
Senior Vice President & Chief of Staff

As we look to the future, Childhelp continues to evolve and adapt, ensuring that we remain at the forefront of child welfare and advocacy. For more than six decades, we have worked tirelessly to meet the changing needs of children, and today, we are laying the foundation for another 66 years of impact. Through strategic partnerships, program innovation, and a renewed commitment to our mission, Childhelp is positioned to continue transforming the lives of children across the U.S.

Strategic Partnerships: Empowering Change

One of the key pillars of Childhelp’s future growth is our strategic partnership with leading organizations in the tech industry. Our collaboration with Meta is a critical step in the fight against sextortion and will expand the reach of our Childhelp Speak Up Be Safe (CH SUBS) program, including the evidence-based core curriculum designed to educate and protect children in grades pre-K-12. “We are thrilled to partner with Meta to develop a new SUBS curriculum designed to empower youth with the knowledge and tools to recognize, avoid, and prevent online exploitation,” said, Cheridan Melvin, Senior Director for Childhelp.

With Meta’s support, we are launching a new CH SUBS module on sextortion and online safety in February 2025, increasing awareness and providing critical resources to facilitators, youth, and their families. Childhelp and Meta engaged a panel of subject matter experts committed to child safety to ensure the program remains impactful and relevant. “This partnership allows us to address the increasing challenges young people encounter while navigating digital platforms. By collaborating with Meta and leveraging insights from abuse prevention experts, we are taking meaningful steps to safeguard youth and foster safer online environments,” said Melvin.

Additionally, our partnership with Google has amplified the reach of the Childhelp National Child Abuse Hotline. By leveraging Google’s search capabilities, we’ve made it easier for individuals in crisis to find our services, ensuring immediate support and increased accessibility for those who need it most.

“Meta is proud to partner with Childhelp to support young people and empower them to stay safe online,” said Leah Treitman, Safety Policy Manager at Meta. “We’re excited for this new curriculum to get into the hands of educators around the country, to help young people feel more confident to spot suspicious behavior online and know where to go for help.”

Digital Transformation: A Brand Refresh to Connect and Inspire

Childhelp’s commitment to innovation and impact is reflected in our recent brand refresh, an initiative designed to modernize and unify our presence while staying true to our mission. This comprehensive refresh encompassed updated visual elements, refined messaging, and a renewed focus on the heart of our work: the programs that transform lives. Even the Childhelp logo received a makeover, including new ADA-compliant colors for mobile applications. The iconic hope dove now soars over the word “help,” signaling Childhelp’s readiness for the future while staying rooted in its legacy of hope.

One of the most visible components of this effort is the relaunch of our website. Designed with accessibility and ease of use in mind, the new site serves as a comprehensive resource for children, families, survivors, and supporters alike. It provides a seamless donor experience while providing clear pathways to access critical services, learn about our programs, and support our mission.

This refresh extends beyond the digital sphere, touching every aspect of Childhelp’s brand. From revitalized collateral to an evolving social media strategy, we are redefining how we connect with our community, ensuring that our voice remains clear, consistent, and impactful as we look toward the future.

“Refreshing our brand was about more than just updating visuals—it was about creating a cohesive and modern identity that reflects our mission and connects with all generations,” said Bill Backus, Head of National Brand for Childhelp. “The website relaunch is just one piece of this transformation, ensuring accessibility, clarity, and inspiration for everyone we serve and support.”

Celebrating Hope: The Day of Hope Ride and Flannel Brand Collaboration

This year also marked the first-ever Day of Hope Ride in Phoenix, Arizona, a powerful event that united riders and supporters in solidarity for children in need. Held in honor of the Childhelp National Day of Hope, the ride served as a moving tribute to raise awareness about child abuse and generate critical funds for Childhelp’s mission. The event embodied the community’s unwavering commitment to bringing hope into the lives of vulnerable children and underscored the collective strength needed to champion this important issue.

Adding to the event’s impact, Childhelp partnered with Dixon Flannel to create a custom-designed flannel featuring the organization’s signature colors and logo. This unique collaboration not only spread awareness of Childhelp’s work but also raised an impressive $20,000. Proceeds from the sales directly supported Childhelp’s vital programs, providing healing, hope, and resources to children and families in need.

“Partnering with Childhelp has been an incredible journey,” said Danny Dreyer, Founder and CEO of Dixon Flannel Company. “Together, we’re helping to create a world where every child can feel safe and supported.”

Amplifying Voices of Resilience: Launching the Childhelp Dare to Care Podcast

Earlier this year, Childhelp embarked on the transformative journey of launching the Childhelp Dare to Care Podcast in partnership with Inspired Media 360. This powerful initiative was created to amplify the voices of individuals who have experienced and overcome abuse, offering a platform to share their stories, inspire others, and raise awareness about the realities of child abuse.

The podcast made its impactful debut in September 2024, premiering five deeply moving episodes that bring listeners face-to-face with courageous survivors. These firsthand accounts of resilience and hope provide a healing space for those who have endured similar experiences while educating the public about the lasting effects of abuse and the critical importance of prevention and intervention.

Looking ahead, additional episodes are set to launch in early 2025, continuing to shine a light on survivor experiences and fostering a deeper understanding of this vital issue. Through these stories, Childhelp reaffirms its mission to bring healing, hope, and unconditional love to children and families in need.

“At Inspired Media 360, we’re all about telling the story behind the story, and partnering with Childhelp on the Dare to Care Podcast allowed us to do just that,” said Carey Peña, Founder & CEO at Inspired Media 360. “Childhelp’s mission to bring healing and hope aligns with our passion for uncovering the raw, authentic voices that inspire change. Together, we’re not just sharing stories—we’re creating a movement to educate, empower, and transform lives.”

Looking Ahead

As we celebrate the progress we have made, we also recognize the challenges that lie ahead. By continuing to forge powerful partnerships, invest in innovative programs, and listen to the voices of survivors, Childhelp will remain a steadfast advocate for children, ensuring that every child has the opportunity to heal, grow, and thrive. The future is bright for Childhelp, and with your continued support, we will continue to make a lasting impact for generations to come.

You're Safe Here: Childhelp Advocacy Centers

For children who have experienced the unimaginable, Childhelp Advocacy Centers provide a place of comfort, safety, and healing. These centers offer a child-friendly, trauma-informed environment where young victims of abuse can receive the support they need to begin their recovery.

The centers bring together law enforcement, child protective services, medical professionals, and counselors under one roof, ensuring children do not have to repeat their painful stories. Instead, they share their experiences in a safe and supportive space, helping them start the healing process while justice is pursued.

In addition to reducing retraumatization, the centers provide essential medical evaluations and therapy to address both the emotional and physical scars of abuse. From the moment a child steps through the door, they are met with kindness and care, reinforcing the message that they are safe, believed, and supported. For families, the centers offer resources and guidance to help them navigate the difficult journey of healing.

One powerful example of the centers' impact comes from the story of a 12-year-old girl who disclosed years of sexual abuse by her biological father. When she arrived at the center, she was struggling with deep emotional scars. Suicidal, self-harming, and withdrawn, she wore dark, oversized clothes and hid her face behind her long hair. She had been hospitalized twice for suicidal thoughts.

Over two years of trauma-focused care, her transformation was remarkable. The center's counselors helped her process her abuse, rebuild her sense of safety, and regain her confidence. With the support of Bikers Against Child Abuse (BACA), she even found the courage to face her abuser in court, where he was sentenced to 25 years in prison.

By the end of treatment, she had begun wearing bright clothes, improved her hygiene, and set goals for her future. Her grades improved, reflecting her growing focus and self-confidence. Most importantly, she no longer had thoughts of harming herself and embraced a healthier, more hopeful outlook on life.

On her last day of therapy, her therapist wanted to give her a parting gift to honor her resilience. Unlike many teenagers, she asked for a Barbie Doll. She explained that she used to love playing with Barbies but stopped when the abuse began. For her, the doll was more than a toy—it symbolized the chance to reconnect with the innocence of her childhood, which had been stolen. "I want to remember what it's like to be that girl again," she said.

Childhelp Advocacy Centers offer more than just immediate support—they lay the foundation for lasting healing. Through a combination of compassionate care, expert services, and the unwavering dedication of all involved, these centers help children move from surviving to thriving. Each story of healing is a testament to the hope, love, and strength that Childhelp Advocacy Centers offer to those who need it most.

You're Not Alone: The Childhelp National Child Abuse Hotline

In a world where millions of children suffer in silence, the Childhelp National Child Abuse Hotline stands as a beacon of hope and healing for children, families, and caregivers across the U.S. Since 1982, this critical service has fielded more than 2 million calls, offering comfort and guidance to those in desperate need. Each call represents a moment of courage: a child seeking safety, a parent looking for guidance, or a community member stepping forward to report suspected abuse.

What sets the hotline apart is its trauma-informed, personalized approach. The hotline is staffed 24/7 by professional crisis counselors and provides confidential support in over 240 languages. Whether through a phone call, text message, or online chat, every voice is heard and every plea is met with compassion. The hotline's reach extends far beyond immediate crisis intervention—it connects callers to a network of resources, including legal support, local child protective services, counseling, and prevention programs. For many, it's the first step in navigating a complex system to find the help they need to rebuild their lives.

Childhelp also recognizes the unique challenges faced by young athletes. To address this, it launched the Childhelp Courage First Athlete Helpline, offering specialized support for athletes dealing how to access support, including CPS and grief counseling for the family. The girl expressed her gratitude for the help and understanding she received, saying, "Thank you for everything. Really. (Like you) just provide info, but you do change lives. (You) just changed mine."

This story is just one of thousands that highlight the profound difference Childhelp's hotlines make every day. They embody the organization's mission to provide unconditional love and a safe space for those in crisis. These life-changing services ensure that children, teens, parents, caregivers, and adult survivors of abuse have someone to turn to, day or night, because no one should have to face abuse alone.

"You have given me the most information that anyone has. I really appreciate you listening to me."

with emotional, physical, or sexual abuse in sports. Together, these two hotlines create a comprehensive safety net for children and teens in need.

One recent call to the Childhelp National Child Abuse Hotline highlights the transformative impact of these services. A 15-year-old girl from California initially reached out, asking for help for a friend experiencing neglect and emotional abuse. As the conversation unfolded, she revealed that she was seeking help for herself. She explained that her mother had been struggling since her father's death, spiraling into alcoholism and neglecting her and her siblings. The girl, afraid of being placed in foster care, had hesitated to speak up but found the courage to share her story. The counselor listened with empathy, providing information on

Preventing Abuse Through Education: The Childhelp Speak Up Be Safe Program

For millions of children, the sense of safety and care that should define childhood is overshadowed by the threat of abuse. Recognizing the urgent need for prevention, Childhelp Speak Up Be Safe (CH SUBS) is a groundbreaking program that empowers children, families, and communities to prevent and interrupt abuse.

At its core, CH SUBS is more than just a curriculum; it's a movement. Designed for students in grades pre-k–12, the program delivers evidenced-based, age-appropriate lessons to teach children how to recognize unsafe situations, identify safe adults, and speak up assertively when they feel at risk. Engaging activities and open conversations create a foundation of knowledge that builds confidence and resilience in the process. But the program's true strength lies in its comprehensive approach. It's not just about educating children; it's about empowering entire communities. By providing resources and training for parents, caregivers, educators, and local leaders, CH SUBS builds a network of vigilance and support, ensuring that children have allies at every turn.

This holistic model addresses a wide range of dangers. From physical and emotional abuse to bullying, cyberbullying, and digital safety, CH SUBS equips children with the tools, and resources they need to navigate an ever-evolving world.

The program's impact is felt nationwide, sparking change in classrooms and communities alike. At a recent state boys' wrestling championship, the CH SUBS for Athletes initiative demonstrated its value when a concerned parent approached the program's table. He shared troubling accounts of hazing rituals on his son's team, including instances of sexual harassment in the locker room.

The CH SUBS team listened, educated him on athlete abuse and reporting processes, and provided resources tailored to his concerns. Armed with this information, the parent returned to his community determined to collaborate with school administrators and bring the program to his son's school. His story underscores a key truth: Prevention isn't just about reacting to problems—it's about empowering people to stop them before they occur.

In addition to its national reach, Childhelp has partnered with the U.S. Department of Defense since 2019 to provide CH SUBS on U.S. military bases worldwide, offering vital prevention education and resources to K-5th grade students. In 2025, the partnership is expanding to include grade levels K-12, ensuring even greater support for military families—who often face unique challenges—and strengthening the program's mission to safeguard children everywhere.

By addressing abuse prevention openly, CH SUBS is breaking down barriers of stigma and fear. In its wake, it leaves a culture of accountability and support where children feel heard, and communities unite to protect them.

The message of CH SUBS is simple but profound: every child deserves to grow up without fear, and every adult has a role to play in making that a reality. Through its transformative education and community outreach, CH SUBS is turning this belief into action—one child, one family, and one community at a time.

A Brighter Future: Childhelp Foster Care, Relative Care, and Group Homes

Childhelp has been a steadfast advocate for children in need, providing life-changing services that help children and families heal and grow. Through its Childhelp Foster Care, Relative Care, and Group Home programs, Childhelp plays a vital role in supporting children who’ve experienced trauma, ensuring they receive the love and care they deserve.

Foster Care: A Pathway to Healing

When children are removed from unsafe homes, they face significant emotional, mental, and physical challenges. Childhelp’s Foster Care program ensures these children are placed in loving, supportive homes where they can begin their journey of recovery. Across California and Tennessee, 157 children in the Childhelp Foster Care program experienced reunification with their birth families or adoption—an accomplishment that highlights the success of the organization’s therapeutic, family-focused approach.

As one foster parent shared, “Because of the expertise of the staff at Childhelp, children are placed in homes where they will receive the utmost care for their physical and emotional needs, and what is best for their family’s well-being.” Through comprehensive care, children receive therapeutic services at no cost, addressing the deep trauma they have experienced and helping them heal. The Childhelp team works closely with families to provide stability, creating an environment where children can begin to feel safe, loved, and supported once again.

Relative Care: Keeping Families Together

Research shows that children placed with relatives experience fewer behavioral challenges and better emotional outcomes than those placed in non-familial foster care. Childhelp’s Relative Care program plays a critical role in maintaining family connections by providing resources and support to relative caregivers. This program helps stabilize families and prevent children from entering state custody.

This year, the Childhelp Relative Care program served 222 families and kept 473 children from entering state custody in Tennessee. By offering services like case management, support groups for caregivers, and holiday assistance, the program ensures these families have the resources they need to create safe, loving homes for children. This commitment to family preservation reflects Childhelp’s belief in the importance of keeping children connected to their roots.

California Group Homes: Providing Stability and Healing

For children who cannot remain with their families due to safety concerns, Childhelp’s California Group Homes offer a safe and nurturing environment. These homes provide a trauma-informed space where children can heal, grow, and rebuild their lives. Group home staff is dedicated to creating an atmosphere of stability and consistency, offering children the emotional and therapeutic support they need.

Through these group homes, children have access to case management and therapy to address their unique needs. The goal is not only to provide a temporary safe haven but also to prepare them for a brighter future.

Through these programs, Childhelp is transforming lives and offering hope for a brighter future to children in need. With its commitment to long-term care, therapy, and family reunification, Childhelp ensures that children in foster and relative care receive the support needed to thrive—not just survive. In a time when the need for child welfare services is growing, Childhelp continues to lead the way in providing a loving, supportive environment for children in crisis.

The Alice C. Tyler Village of Childhelp A Place of Healing and Hope for Children in Crisis

Nestled on 270 acres in rural Virginia, The Alice C. Tyler Village of Childhelp serves as a sanctuary for children who have endured abuse, neglect, and behavioral challenges. As a nonprofit psychiatric residential treatment facility, The village offers a serene, nurturing environment where children receive individualized care that addresses their emotional, physical, educational, and spiritual needs. This holistic approach, combined with a variety of therapeutic services, helps children rebuild their lives, empowering them to overcome past trauma and embrace brighter futures.

At the heart of The Alice C. Tyler Village of Childhelp is a team of compassionate professionals dedicated to the well-being of each child. Children live in age- and gender-appropriate cottages, receiving 24/7 care from a committed staff, including full-time psychiatric support and a dedicated nursing team. Alongside individualized therapy, children engage in recreational and therapeutic activities such as art therapy, sports, and community outings—all designed to promote healing and personal growth.

For many children, like C, the impact of this care is life-changing. At just three years old, C's innocence was shattered by neglect and abuse. After being separated from her mother, she spent years enduring cruelty at the hands of distant relatives. But when C arrived at The Alice C. Tyler Village of Childhelp, a glimmer of hope emerged. Surrounded by the warmth of compassionate caregivers, C began to rebuild trust and open her heart to healing. One pivotal moment in C's recovery came through horseback riding, an unexpected sanctuary for her troubled spirit. The silent language of the horses and their gentle presence helped her unravel the deep trauma she had carried for so long. With each nudge and soulful gaze, C learned to trust again, finding a sense of peace that had eluded her for years.

The village's holistic approach is evident in the results: 90% of children discharged from the program transition to a lower level of care, demonstrating The village's success in preparing children for life beyond residential care. Academic growth is also a priority, with children showing significant improvement during their stay. On average, reading skills increase by 1.5 grades, and math skills by 1.2 grades—reflecting the staff's dedication to fostering not only emotional healing but also educational success.

Through therapeutic care, academic support, and life-enriching activities like horseback riding, children at The Alice C. Tyler Village of Childhelp are given the tools they need to thrive. It is a safe, loving environment where children can rebuild their lives, and its impact continues to resonate as they reintegrate into homes and communities, prepared for ongoing success.

Through the work of The Alice C. Tyler Village of Childhelp, the organization remains steadfast in its mission to provide healing and hope to every child who walks through its doors, ensuring they are equipped to live their lives with love, resilience, and the promise of a brighter future.

“Together, we’ve helped children find their voices, families discover strength, and communities embrace hope.”

Planting Seed of Change: The Role of Supporters in our Vision

As I reflect on the past year, I am filled with gratitude for the incredible community of supporters who make Childhelp’s mission possible. Every contribution—whether time, resources, or heartfelt advocacy—plants seeds of change, nurturing a future where every child can grow up surrounded by love, safety, and hope.

Your generosity has been instrumental in helping us meet the challenges facing children and families across the country. From the life-saving calls answered by the Childhelp National Child Abuse Hotline to the healing provided in our Childhelp Advocacy Centers, Foster Care, and Residential Treatment Programs, your support has touched countless lives. Together, we’ve helped children find their voices, families discover strength, and communities embrace hope.

Yet, as we celebrate these milestones, we also recognize that this year has been about more than responding to today’s needs—it has been an investment in tomorrow. We’ve strengthened our foundation to ensure that Childhelp is prepared to meet the challenges ahead. By enhancing our programs, expanding our reach, and fostering innovation, we are building a future that will sustain our mission for the next 66 years and beyond.

This future-focused work is only possible because of you—our dedicated donors, volunteers, and partners. Your unwavering belief in our mission fuels our efforts to address not just the symptoms of child abuse but its root causes, creating lasting change for generations to come.

The impact of your support is felt in every child who finds healing and every family that experiences hope. But there is still so much more to do. As we move forward together, I invite you to continue planting seeds of change with us. Volunteer. Advocate. Give. Your involvement ensures that every child who walks through Childhelp’s doors has the opportunity to thrive in a world rooted in hope.

Thank you for standing with us in this mission. Together, we are transforming lives and building a brighter, safer future for all children.

With heartfelt gratitude,

Jim Hebets
Executive Vice President, Childhelp National Board of Directors

In Service of Hope: Acknowledgements

Hope flourishes at Childhelp because of the unwavering dedication of our board members and chapter leadership teams. Your commitment to our mission inspires action, drives change, and nurtures a brighter future for countless children and their families. You are the roots that strengthen our foundation, the branches that extend our reach, and the canopy that offers safety and love. With heartfelt gratitude, we honor your invaluable contributions to ending child abuse and building a world where every child has the opportunity to rise, heal, and thrive.

Shaping a Brighter Future Together

Joey and Ivy Ciolli's Commitment to Childhelp

In Phoenix, Arizona, Joey and Ivy Ciolli have built a successful business with Grimaldi's Pizza while cultivating a legacy of giving back to their community. As philanthropists and dedicated advocates for Childhelp, they exemplify how business and compassion can drive meaningful change.

Joey, a member of Childhelp's National Board of Directors, and Ivy, a member of its Arizona Advisory Board, have supported Childhelp for 12 years. Their commitment began with a shared desire to help those without a voice. "I've always believed in standing up for those who can't stand up for themselves," Ivy said.

Their connection to Childhelp deepened after Joey attended an event and shared his experience with Ivy. "It's impossible to learn about the work Childhelp does and not be moved," Joey explained. "We knew we had to be part of it."

As a couple, Joey and Ivy bring complementary perspectives to their roles within Childhelp. Joey's business acumen provides strategic insights that drive organizational goals, while Ivy's empathy ensures that every decision remains centered on the children and families they serve. "We balance each other," Ivy noted. "Joey brings a long-term, strategic perspective, while I focus on the heart of the matter."

Ivy's passion for storytelling drives her involvement. "What inspires me most are the success stories," she said. "Hearing how a child's life has been transformed reminds me why this work matters." Chairing events has been especially meaningful for Ivy. "Each event is an opportunity to connect people to the stories that illustrate Childhelp's impact."

Joey's advocacy extends beyond the boardroom. He has testified before Congress to share the impact of Childhelp and advocate for stronger child protection policies. "Speaking to lawmakers and sharing the impact of Childhelp's work has been especially meaningful for me," he said. "It's not just about raising awareness; it's about advocating for policies that will make a lasting difference for children."

A major focus for the Ciollis is the Childhelp National Child Abuse Hotline. They're passionate about finding new ways to make the hotline more accessible to children and youth in crisis. "It's crucial that we connect with kids, whether through digital platforms or increased outreach," Joey shared. Ivy added, "Every child needs to know the hotline is there for them, and we're committed to ensuring that it's easy for them to reach out when they need help."

Looking to the future, the Ciollis are focused on expanding Childhelp's preventative efforts. "Addressing the root causes of abuse, such as mental health and societal factors, is critical," Ivy said. "The only way to end abuse is through prevention." Joey echoed this, emphasizing proactive measures. "Prevention is key, and we must keep finding innovative ways to reach children and families before abuse happens."

The Ciollis' dedication to Childhelp has left a lasting impact on the organization and the lives of countless children and families. Their story is a testament to the power of leadership, love, and the belief that together, we can shape a brighter future.

Financial Stewardship: Ensuring Impact

Thank you for your continued support of Childhelp. We are incredibly grateful for your steadfast commitment to our mission. Your generosity enables us to continue working toward a future where every child can thrive in a world free from abuse and neglect.

I am excited to share Childhelp’s financial progress over the past year. Thanks to our action plan, we ended the fiscal year with a surplus of $27,550,000. While we did face a FY24 operating deficit of $6,114,000—primarily due to initial operational issues—Childhelp remains debt-free, with $7,815,000 in cash on hand, $7,388,000 in accounts receivable, and buildings/land valued at $17,500,000.

As we enter FY25, despite the operational issues which we addressed over the past year, we still face an operating deficit of $1,900,000, largely due to the expiration of the two million dollar Childhelp National Child Abuse Hotline Health &

Human Services grant. However, with the continued expansion of our Philanthropy team and increased Marketing efforts, we are actively diversifying revenue sources to strengthen our financial position. I am confident that, with your support, we will continue to grow out of this deficit in the coming years.

The need for Childhelp’s services has never been greater, as cases of child abuse and neglect continue to rise nationwide. These challenges only strengthen our resolve to respond with urgency and compassion. With your support, we are investing in long-term solutions that break the cycle of abuse and bring healing to children. Through strong financial stewardship, we remain committed to sustaining this vital work and building a future where every child is safe, supported, and free from harm.

We are confident that, with the ongoing support of our community—donors, volunteers, board members, and chapter leaders—we will continue to fulfill our promise to the children and families we serve. The seeds of hope we plant today will help build a brighter tomorrow for those who need it most.

With heartfelt thanks,

Stephen Tucker
Chief Financial Officer

“With each gift, you provide hope, love, and healing—changing lives today and for a lifetime. Your generosity builds a safer future for every child and strengthens the foundation of care and support they rely on.”
